JOINT RESTORATION MADE EASY

PECORA SIL-SPAN TECHNOLOGY™
PREFORMED SILICONE PROFILES
SIL-SPAN “BRIDGES” JOINTS TO WATERPROOF THE BUILDING ENVELOPE WHILE MAINTAINING THE ORIGINAL AESTHETIC OF THE SUBSTRATE. THIS SAVES YOU TIME AND MONEY.
Joint sealant failures remain a common—and harmful—issue over a building’s lifespan. Repairing joint sealant failures traditionally involved failed sealant and surface preparation—often resulting in substrate damage and huge labor costs (especially for exterior insulation and finish systems, or EIFS). Pecora’s Sil-Span Preformed Silicone Profiles provide an alternative to the traditional method of repairing failed sealant joints. Sil-Span “bridges” over the joint to waterproof the building envelope while maintaining the original aesthetic of the substrate—saving you time and budget.

Sil-Span is made of a specially formulated high-molecular weight, low-modulus silicone compound which is extruded into preformed strips and custom shapes. This advanced silicone technology is easy to apply, comes in many widths and colors, adheres to most common substrates, and will not stain adjacent surfaces. Its design properties suit a variety of construction applications including expansion joints. Sil-Span can also correct failures in areas of the building envelope which prove difficult or almost impossible to replace or reseal through conventional methods, including metal curtain walls, stuck, skylights, roofing details, coping stones, and flashing details.

As the bond between Sil-Span and the substrate, Pecora’s full line of non-staining silicones provide outstanding adhesion to many substrates including rough textures such as EIFS and exposed aggregate.

Sil-Span’s design properties suit a variety of construction applications including expansion joints. Sil-Span also accommodates glass-to-glass and glass-to-metal glazing details including skylight or glazing repair.
